Leery of men and romance widow Darcy O'Brien is doing her best to make a life for herself and her young son. Jade fire gold book ratings The two main characters Darcy O' Brien and Joshua Markham both had partners in the past that made it very difficult for either of them to trust someone else and even with growing feelings towards each other those trust issues were always rearing their ugly heads needing to be dealt with. Fire service gold book There's the tension between Darcy and her father something that's never been resolved over many years due to the circumstances surrounding Darcy's mother's death(no major spoilers here!) and with faith and other family members they learn to forgive and heal. Gold in the fireman Darcy has an eight year old son Sean who has never had a strong father figure in his life as Darcy's husband who passed away years ago never paid his son the attention he so desperately needed. Gold in the firez book Joshua soon becomes a wonderful father figure to him over the summer Darcy and Sean are staying with her father who's recovering from a heart attack which is why they are there Darcy is helping with the horse farm her father owns she steps in as temporary manager. Gold in the firetrol There are many issues that are dealt with in this short book but I really enjoyed it especially the manner in which the adults take their problems to God relying on their Christian faith. Gold in the firequest ammo Each with the help of young Sean housekeeper Lizzy and friend/local matchmaker Jesse Bradshaw grows with the other and puts aside the past in order to move happily forward together. Jade fire gold book 2 The widowed librarian also was married to an Air Force man one who also didn't communicate much especially with their son never trying to make time to interact or understand him for not being there for her. True gold does not fear fire Margaret Daley Although I normally don't read romance novels (I refer to most as chick porn because they tend to make women dissatisfied with their relationships just as risque pictures do for guys) Margaret Daley's Steeple Hill books are generally an exception. Gold in the firez book How much of her true self should Darcy reveal to others? Is she willing to share her true feelings with her estranged father her friend Joshua and others--even if it makes them mad/uncomfortable or it leaves her feeling vulnerable? After one failed marriage for Darcy and a near-miss for Joshua are the two of them ready for the risk of taking their friendship to a deeper level? Can Darcy bear to relive the pain of her mother's illness to be a friend to a mom and daughter in similar circumstances? Solving the mystery of a string of arsons is nothing compared to the risks Margaret's characters face relationally,

. Very good romance yet a short easy read. Both have to learn to trust themselves. Darcy has quite a lot to deal with. For GOLD IN THE FIRE the deeper message is risk-taking
