

How to Save Your Child from Ostrich Attacks, Accidental Time Travel, and Anything Else that Might Happen on an Average Tuesday By James Breakwell English This book makes me laugh out loud as well as read out loud some of the passages to whoever is nearby so they can share the humour with me! English I love this book! Just picked it up today and I'm already deep into it! It's so well written and funny and it hits home everytime! Especially the chapter on when your kids get abducted by aliens!!! My wife and I are laughing our way through the hardest parts English

James Breakwell is a professional comedy writer and amateur father of four girls ages eight and under. 22 shipping How to Save Your Child from Ostrich Attacks Accidental Time Travel and Anything Else that Might Happen on an Average Tuesday I'm not a parent but I love this book nonetheless! James is very knowledgeable in survival skills. English Despite having absolutely zero children this book still offers helpful advice to those of us who aren't parents to survive some seriously dire situations such as Black Friday sales geese (very important up here in Canada).

Any kind of monster (still important to me at English Omg this book is funny! I laughed out loud several times: A must read! And make sure to sign up for his weekly news letters. He is best known for his family humor Twitter account @XplodingUnicorn which boasts than one million followers and has been featured on media outlets around the world. He also writes a parenting column for the IndyStar where he antagonizes overachieving parents everywhere. Now I'm confident in fighting ostriches and talking to woolly mammoth. They are great to read first thing Monday morning.$10